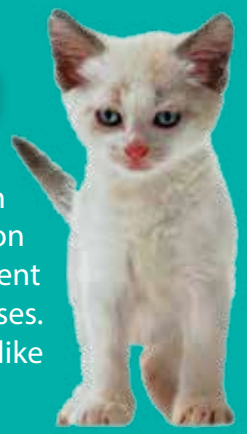
FELINE Vaccination



Cats get the flu too..... A regular veterinary health examination together with a vaccination program can help detect and prevent potentially life threatening diseases. This is a full nose to tail check-up - like an animal "Warrant of Fitness"

"Broadline", the complete flea and worm control "spot on" for cats.

Broadline ½ PRICE with each vaccination

Cotton's Corner

What better time for a "Warrant of Fitness" than the start of a new year? A regular veterinary health check and vaccination programme can help detect and prevent potentially life threatening diseases. Nobody likes coming to the doctor but honestly "my vets" are actually exceptional - very thorough but very gentle and they will usually have a treat or two for obliging patients.
If you are not vaccinated, then make sure you have your human bring you in to see one of my vets soon!.....

Microchip Batch Failure

One version of microchip inserted several years ago is showing signs of early failure.

The Veterinary Centre is mining its database to identify which of our clients' animals are involved.

Clients of affected animals will be contacted in the near future.

These animals will be able to have new microchips inserted at no cost to the owner.

Interesting Case

Smoké and Her Tumour

Her vet, Bridget, found a rare tumor on her pancreas called an Insulinoma

Smoké the Huntaway, presented to the Veterinary Centre Oamaru after having a seizure. Her Blue Cross vet, Bridget, found that Smoké's blood sugar levels were extremely low. After further tests Smoké was diagnosed with a rare tumor on her pancreas called an Insulinoma. These tumors produce a massive amount of insulin (the hormone normally used to treat diabetics). This over supply of insulin was the cause of Smoké's low blood sugar levels and seizure. A technical surgery was preformed to remove Smoke's tumor. During surgery a bright blue dye was administered into her vein, to 'light up' the tumor on her pancreas so her veterinary surgeon could find it. Smoké's surgery was a success. The following day Smoké's sugar levels had returned to normal and she was looking a lot happier. The surgery means Smoké has more time to continue to do her favorite thing - barking at sheep!

Smoké is a lot happier now
